

YOUTHHOOD.ORG

LIFE IS WHAT YOU MAKE IT. YOUTHHOOD.ORG CAN MAKE IT GREAT.

WELCOME TO THE NEIGHBORHOOD!

What is Youthhood.org?

Youthhood.org (also known as The Youthhood) is a free, dynamic Web-based curriculum and tool to help youth set goals and plan for the future. Although the site addresses youth directly, it is intended to be used in classrooms, community programs, or any other settings where adults work with youth. The Youthhood includes information, interactive activities, and a wealth of other tools to help youth connect their future goals to their academic learning.

Welcome to the neighborhood!

The Youthhood is organized like a neighborhood. Each section of the neighborhood provides tools and information to help youth plan for the future. Those sections include —

- The High School helps youth explore how their schoolwork can support their dreams and plans for the future. It also helps youth understand and plan for post-high school education, training, and employment opportunities.
- The Job Center encourages youth to explore their interests, identify their skills, and discover what they still need to learn in order to achieve their employment goals.
- The Community Center focuses on leadership, mentoring, and community involvement and how development of skills and goals in these areas can lead to post-high school success.
- The Hangout addresses belonging, friendships, and having fun. Youth learn about themselves, their relationships with others, and things they can do for fun in their free time.
- The Health Clinic focuses on health issues including managing health care and preventing health problems. It also addresses disabilities and chronic illness, health insurance, relationships, and sexuality.
- The Government Center outlines the rights of youth at school, at home, in employment settings, and within the court system. This unit also addresses legal rights gained at the age of majority.

- The Apartment helps youth explore the independence. This unit provides information on being safe, budgeting, using public transportation, finding a place to live, and more.

My Youthhood: Interactive Features

The Youthhood also includes several exciting interactive tools that can be accessed through the 'My Youthhood' sidebar. These can be used to enhance learning in content areas and youth can save and store these to our on-line database. These include the:

- Private Journal: Here, youth can log their thoughts, ideas, issues, or anything else as they work their way through the Web site. This journal is completely private, with access only to youth through use of their password.
- Activities Folder: Each content area has corresponding activities to reinforce what youth learn. These activities can be saved in the Activities Folder for viewing, editing, or printing at a later date.
- Life Map: The Life Map is a tool to help youth plan for the future. Youth can write down their goals, steps they will take to achieve their goals, and other important information related to what they're learning on the Web site. Teachers can also use the Life Map for assignments. For youth with disabilities, the Life Map parallels the Individualized Education Program (IEP) and can be used by young adults and transition case managers in transition planning meetings.
- Class Notebook: Teachers, mentors, and parents can ask youth to write in their Class Notebook about what they have learned on a certain topic, and then comment on and grade their work. The Class Notebook is not private.

Adults working with you have access to both the Class Notebook and the Life Map. These two tools can be utilized within the classroom or as homework assignments to emphasize content area information. Both can be viewed, comments can be posted, and grades can be assigned.

Under the Hood* On-line Magazine (under construction)

Under the Hood is The Youthhood's on-line magazine, written and edited by youth. This e-zine will serve as a resource and tool youth can use to find out what other youth are thinking, saying, and experiencing in the U.S. and around the world. .
